4000TH U.S. MEDICAL OFFICE DEPLOYS MEDINOTES CORPORATION'S ELECTRONIC MEDICAL RECORD SYSTEM

Over 18,500 Individual Licenses Sold for MediNotes EMR, Making MediNotes e the Most Widely Adopted EMR for Small to Mid-Sized Ambulatory Care Settings in the U.S.

WEST DES MOINES, Iowa – (July 19, 2007) – MediNotes Corporation, the leading provider of Best of Breed electronic medical record solutions for small to medium primary care and specialty medical practices, announced today that it has surpassed 4,000 medical offices using their EMR, MediNotes e. Of the 4,000 small to mid-size medical offices that deployed MediNotes' EMR, the company has sold more than 18,500 individual licenses, making it one of the most widely used and deployed EMR system for small to medium-sized healthcare practices.

In 1998, after originally being established in 1996 as PodNotes, an electronic medical record originally designed for podiatrists, MediNotes broadened the scope of its product to support to a variety of medical specialties, and over the past decade has expanded to include support for 17 disciplines, including family practice and general medicine.. Since its inception, the company has grown to include 100 employees, including a department dedicated to providing daily product support to their more than 18,500 users.

Making this milestone even more remarkable is the fact that MediNotes also boasts an overall implementation and usage success rate that exceeds 94 percent for new MediNotes e clients. This surpasses the overall EMR industry rate, which suffers from an implementation failure rate that is estimated to fall between 40 – 80 percent. Proper training and management of the transition from paper to electronic medical records are key elements to successful implementation of electronic medical records.

“With the move toward a nationally interoperable system of electronic medical records, we have been careful to maintain ongoing communication with our more than 18,500 users, as well as with others in the healthcare field to ensure we are providing the tools and features they need,” stated Donald G. Schoen, CEO and President of MediNotes Corporation. “We have become one of the most widely-adopted EMR systems for small to mid-sized ambulatory providers because we have worked closely with those in the medical profession as we developed the content for MediNotes e. We continue to provide technology that keeps up with the evolving demands of our customers and the healthcare industry. Additionally, we believe one of the most important aspects we can provide is the on-going training and support of our clients. Everyone at MediNotes works hard to ensure our clients ‘Get it Right the First Time,’ when it comes to implementing an EMR system.”

“MediNotes e has allowed me to quadruple the number of patients I see nearly effortlessly,” commented Scharmaine Lawson, a nurse practitioner based in New Orleans. “Implementing the EMR system from MediNotes has saved me both time and money. With a current caseload approaching nearly 500 patients, MediNotes e has increased the amount of quality time I spend with each patient, allowing me to provide the social component that is often missing, but that is a vital part of healthcare services.”

Lawson provides home healthcare services to the elderly and homebound disabled who would otherwise be unable to afford conventional healthcare services. With affordability and return on investment is also an issue facing healthcare providers when selecting an EMR product, Lawson indicated it only took her a month to recoup the cost on her investment, making MediNotes EMR system affordable for even single-provider practices to implement.
